

Hartley-Brewer Negotiation Consultants

Executive Briefing

Hartley-Brewer Negotiation Consultants Ltd

Email: stephen@hartley-brewer.com

Web: www.hartley-brewer.com

Telephone: +44 (0)7977 076 042

Registered in England & Wales, company number 09036600

Registered office 2 The Rotunda, Upper Hampstead Walk, London NW3 1DE

Contents

	Page
Summary	3
Our Clients	4
Our Consultants	5-7
The Negotiation Masterclass
• Learning Goals	8
• Content	9-10
• Learning Methods	11
• Exercises	12
The 'Booster' Day	13
Consulting Services	14
Training Courses: Terms of Business	15

Summary

We deliver top quality negotiation skills training to key negotiators in corporate and investment banks, private equity houses, corporates in all sectors, professional firms and public authorities.

We also provide advice on the planning and conduct of major negotiations.

Our consultants have high level, real world negotiation experience and have been intensively trained by negotiation ‘guru’, Mike Hartley-Brewer.

We provide a three day Negotiation Masterclass and an optional one day ‘Booster’ course six to twelve months later.

The Masterclass covers all key areas, including

- Planning in a structured but flexible way
- Managing the negotiation process through its three phases
- Creating value by optimising the deal ‘shape’
- Claiming value through the effective use of power
- Knowing when and how to use reasoned argument – and when not to
- Effective teamwork
- Managing personal style and behaviour

There is also a major focus on the increasingly important hybrid process of ‘negoti-auctions’.

Participants in the Masterclass receive a copy of The Complete Negotiator, a manual packed with practical tools and techniques, and The Pocket Negotiator, its portable companion.

Our training is highly interactive (no ‘torture by PowerPoint’!) and centres on participation in realistic negotiation exercises with video playback and analysis to bring out key learning points.

Our tutors are direct and robust but humorous.

To minimise ‘days off the job’, some clients prefer to run the Masterclass in two long days (8am-8pm) and/or to use a weekend day.

The cost of a Masterclass in the UK for 12 participants is £26,700 (£2,225 per head). The payback is typically a very large multiple of the cost and comes in the form of better prices, fees and other terms with customers, clients and suppliers; and improved relationships both internally and externally.

We encourage our clients to measure the return on their investment.

Our Clients

Our consultants have provided negotiation skills training for numerous clients in a wide range of sectors, including (in alphabetical order):

Allied Irish Bank	GKN Aerospace
Almirall	Gudme Raaschou
ANZ Bank	Handelsbanken
Austrianova	Henderson Private Capital
Baird	Hewlett Packard
Bauer Media	Home Retail Group
B&Q	HSBC
BBC	Intermediate Capital Group
BHP Petroleum	ING
BNP Paribas	Institut Pasteur
BP	Jewson
Bridgepoint	Kingfisher
Bristol-Myers Squibb	Lazard
BT	Liberty
BTG	Lloyds Bank
Cable & Wireless	Linklaters
CAIB	Lovells
Cairn Energy	McKinsey & Co
Candover Partners	Merrill Lynch
The Carbon Trust	Ministry of Defence (UK)
Carlson Wagonlit Travel	Nationwide
Capita	Nike
Capital Group	Palamon Capital Partners
Carnegie	Rolls Royce
CBPE	NM Rothschild & Sons
Chevron	RBS
Cinven	Schibsted
Colt Telecom	Selfridges
ConocoPhillips	Serco
Commerzbank	Serono International
Credit Suisse	Severn Trent Water
CVC Capital Partners	Silverfleet Capital
Deloitte	Shell
DHL	SkillCapital
Deutsche Bank	Smiths Group
Disney Stores	WH Smith
EMAP	Société Générale
EMI	Staples
Ernst & Young	Talisman Energy
Eurohypo	3i
Exel Logistics	Triton
Exponent	UBS
Flemings	Wragge & Co
General Electric	Zurich Financial Services

Our Consultants

Stephen Hartley-Brewer

Stephen Hartley-Brewer worked extensively in the financial investment and consulting sectors before establishing The Negotiation Skills Group to provide high level negotiation skills training and advice on the planning and conduct of major negotiations.

In July 2015 his firm merged with Hartley-Brewer Negotiation Consultants and Stephen now runs the combined business.

A highly effective trainer and an experienced consultant, he also has strong financial knowledge and skills which are particularly useful when working with clients in the financial services sector.

Stephen has worked with clients in sectors ranging from investment banking and private equity to mezzanine finance, FMCG, media, law firms, utilities, mining, and business services.

After graduating with a First in Philosophy, Politics and Economics from Magdalen College, Oxford, he joined The Boston Consulting Group, one of the world's top consulting firms, where he advised clients in sectors ranging from financial services to retail.

He then moved into finance. While working at blue-chip private equity and hedge funds including BC Partners and TPG-Axon, his negotiation experience covered advisory mandates, financial covenants, distressed debt restructurings, private equity investments, take-privates and litigation.

Having enjoyed negotiating far more than staring at stock prices on a Bloomberg screen or crunching numbers in a spreadsheet, he retired from the markets to establish his own firm specialising in high level negotiation skills development. In doing this he is drawing on a lifetime of lessons from watching and listening to his father Mike Hartley-Brewer who, until his retirement in 2010, was widely regarded as the world's best trainer and consultant in the field of negotiation.

In his spare time Stephen enjoys playing in poker tournaments, scuba diving and skiing, and is an international level freediver.

Our Consultants II

Dr Gabriela Lazar

Gabriela Lazar had wide experience of international negotiations in the pharmaceutical, cosmetics and retail sectors before becoming a negotiation skills trainer.

She joined Hartley-Brewer Negotiation Consultants in 2001 and has run numerous high level negotiation skills courses for clients ranging from investment banks and private equity houses through energy and logistics firms to retailers and pharma companies.

Born in Romania, she graduated in Pharmacy from the Bucharest Institute of Medicine & Pharmacy, having achieved the highest marks in the competitive entrance examination.

She was a member of the Romanian national basketball team, sometimes as the captain, and also won the national championship several times with her club team.

After the fall of the communist regime Gabriela left Romania and went to Paris, where she obtained a PhD with Written Congratulations of the Jury, winning a prize for the best PhD in Pharmacology. She worked in a pharmaceutical research laboratory in parallel with her studies, becoming Head of Skin Care Evaluation, and co-authored four international patents.

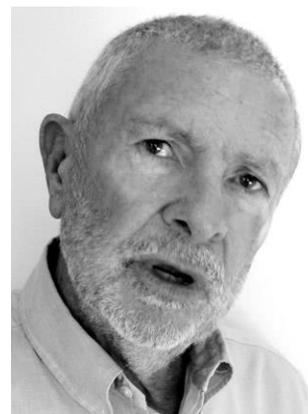

Gabriela then worked in the UK, Germany and France in international Business Development roles in the healthcare industry. She was involved in negotiating licensing agreements and acquisitions and disposals of companies and products internationally. She also successfully negotiated a number of complex distribution contracts while leading a team responsible for the integration across much of Europe of a major acquired product range.

Gabriela speaks fluent English, French and Romanian and has a working knowledge of German and Italian. She enjoys skiing, scuba diving, sailing and horse riding.

Our Consultants III

Mike Hartley-Brewer

Mike Hartley-Brewer is an internationally recognised authority on the theory and practice of negotiation. The firm he established, Hartley-Brewer Negotiation Consultants (HBNC), is widely regarded as the preeminent provider of both negotiation skills training and advice on planning and conducting high value negotiations.

Although he no longer conducts training courses himself, Mike personally trained and mentored the HBNC consulting team.

He advises the firm's clients on how best to meet their needs and is available on request to provide advice to clients on the conduct of important negotiations.

Mike graduated in behavioural sciences. He then worked as a journalist, a Political Adviser to the British Government, and a 'trouble-shooter' and head of training for an international oil trading company before setting up his specialist negotiation consultancy in 1985.

As the leading consultant in his field, Mike worked all over the world with blue chip companies in many sectors, in both training and consulting roles.

He has been profiled in several national newspapers and was the subject of a documentary on BBC Television.

Mike also taught negotiation skills at London Business School for MBA students, managers and entrepreneurs.

He enjoys sailing, Scuba diving and playing poker.

The Negotiation Masterclass: Learning Goals

Our goal is to help participants to become more effective both as solo negotiators and as team members. By the end of the programme all participants should have:

- A clear grasp of their personal negotiating Style and Behaviour and how to manage these more effectively.
- An awareness of the need for both Cooperative Win-Win and Competitive Win-Lose strategies, and the ability to strike a realistic balance between them.
- An understanding of the three fundamental Modes of negotiation – Creativity, Reason and Power – and when to use each of them.
- A set of flexible Planning Tools for determining a limit, target and opening position; deciding what information should be kept vs. shared; planning with multiple issues, etc.
- Practical mechanisms for Creating and exploring Options for Mutual Gain to build a better deal for both parties.
- Effective techniques for using Reason to reach agreement by putting arguments more persuasively.
- The ability to use and resist Power Tactics at the pivotal moments of the negotiation by
 - crafting and reacting to Opening Positions
 - managing the flow of Concessions
 - deploying Closes that seal the deal.
- Proficiency with all the major Gambits: knowing when and how to use them, how to counter them, and even how to counter the counters.
- Enhanced Social Skills in communicating, questioning, listening, managing conflict and reading the hidden meanings of speech and body language.
- A clearer focus on effective Teamwork in the planning and conduct of negotiations.
- Greater Control over the negotiation process – whether face to face or on the phone – to manage a smooth transition through the Three Phases to a successful Closing of the deal.
- A clear understanding of when to run a hybrid Negoti-auction; and how to run and respond to a negoti-auction in both the bidding and negotiation stages.
- Structured techniques for Reviewing both individual and team performance to build on success and learn from setbacks.

The Negotiation Masterclass: Content

Content is not covered in this order. While the course proceeds logically from Planning Tools to the Three Phases to Review, we cover topics as they arise from the simulations or discussion, and we interweave concepts with the practical advice used to implement them at the table.

Introduction

- Identifying participants' specific negotiation problems
- The Three Modes of Negotiation: Creativity, Reason and Power
- The need for more Creativity
- The problem with Reason (it usually doesn't work!)
- The importance of Power

Strategy: Win-Win and Win-Lose: Baking a bigger cake and taking the biggest slice

- Win-Win and Win-Lose defined
- Zero Sum and Non-Zero Sum Games
- Competing and cooperating simultaneously
- The concept of an 'optimum deal shape'
- Win-Win is not the same as compromise!
- How to find Mutual Gains

Style and Behaviour

- Four Negotiating Styles: Warm, Tough, Numbers, Dealer
- Identifying and managing my Style
- Adapting to other people's styles
- DOs and DON'Ts of Behaviour (facilitating or impeding agreement)

Planning Tools

- The Issue Map, Base Shape and Adjusters
- Deciding your Limit: the Best Realistic Alternative (BRA)
- The Negotiable Range
- Setting a Target: the aspiration effect
- Opening Positions: realistic or extreme? The Nibble
- The Concession Matrix
- The Information Matrix
- The OMG Scanner: finding Options for Mutual Gain
- The Deal Juggler – an aid to creativity

Phase I and its Tactics

- Background Statements – a powerful start to the negotiation
- Issues, Interests and Positions: three levels of negotiation
- Building an Agenda for the negotiation – the Issues
- Managing the Information Exchange – exploring Interests
- Deploying and responding to Opening Positions
- Who goes first? The Anchor.
- Floppies and the Flinch
- Tactical Gambits and counter-measures of Phase I

Continued

Phase II and its Tactics

- How to narrow the gap
- What you need to ask before you concede
- The Concession Rules
- Maintaining momentum and keeping control
- Calling and using adjournments constructively
- Tactical Gambits and counter-measures of Phase II

Phase III and its Tactics

- When and how to close
- Effective and ineffective Closes
- The 'Final Offer' Gambit
- Late Gambits and counter-measures – including back-trading
- Summarising the agreement and keeping control of the paperwork
- Breaking a Deadlock: 14 Keys

Performance Review

- Reviewing results against Target and Limit
- Reviewing the process – a systematic approach
- Giving feedback to your team

Tasks and Teamwork

- The four Tasks (Send, Receive, Record, Manage the Meeting)
- Hidden meanings of speech and body language
- Managing the tasks when solo
- Teamwork: the unity problem; the role problem (who does what?)
- The solution: our Team Role System

Media

- Writing, video conference, phone, or face-to-face? Pros and cons of each
- Telephone Tips

Negoti-auctions and negoti-tenders

- When to choose to run an auction (or tender) rather than negotiate bilaterally
- Mitigating the inflexibility of an auction or tender, while maintaining competition
- Bypassing or manipulating an auction or tender: don't be the victim
- Key differences in Planning and Phases, when in a negoti-auction or negoti-tender
- Getting the best bidder to negotiate against him/herself – without lying
- Defence Against The Dark Arts: how to avoid bidding against yourself

Culture

- National, Organisational and Functional Cultures
- The problem of stereotypes
- Dimensions of cultural difference in negotiations
- Coping with cultural differences

Personal Action Plans

- Strengths to build on: how?
- Weaknesses to control: how?
- Commitment to try new skills and techniques
- Defining opportunities to use new skills and techniques

The Negotiation Masterclass: Learning Methods

Small groups of eight to twelve allow participants to practise new skills in a safe environment and to receive individual feedback on their style and behaviour.

Simulated negotiations are the main learning vehicle, together with discussions, group tasks and other interactive procedures.

The style of our course tutors is fast, direct and fun.

Video playback of the negotiation exercises is used

- to introduce key concepts and techniques
- and to give feedback to individuals on their performance.

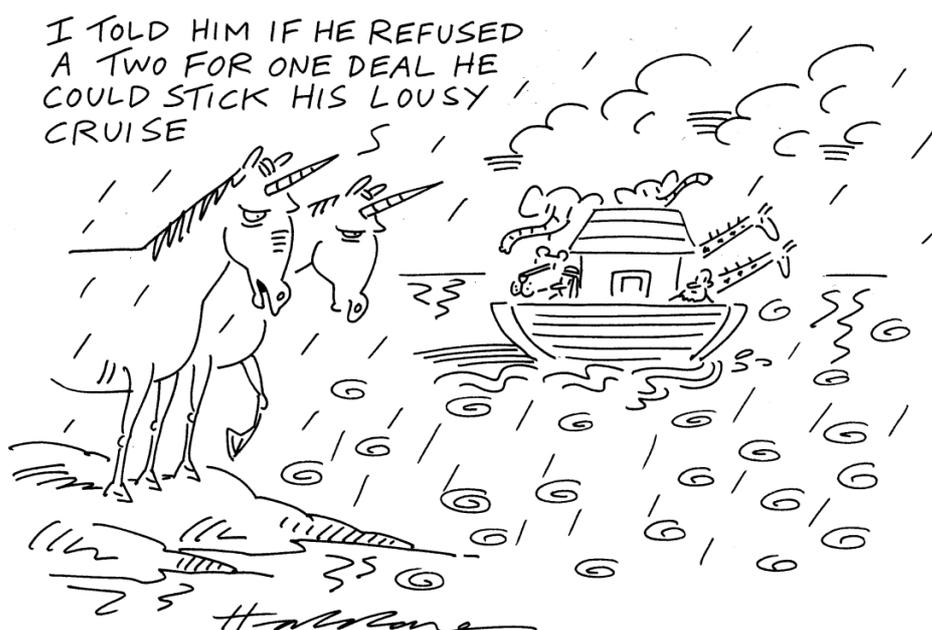

Flexibility is part of the package. There is no rigid daily timetable. Key concepts and skills are detailed in The Complete Negotiator, the course manual. But the syllabus is covered in a way that reflects participants' needs and experience and picks up on the learning points that arise out of each simulation or discussion.

Implementation is a major theme. Participants prepare action plans for building on their strengths and tackling weaknesses; and they identify specific steps to be taken in their relationships with key negotiating partners / upcoming deals.

To help them put their learning into action, participants also receive a portable, ring-bound set of laminated reminder cards, The Pocket Negotiator.

Follow-up and reinforcement are available in the form of a one day 'Booster' course.

Results are measured using our Implementation Checkout questionnaire, which typically demonstrates impressively large financial savings and gains as well as improvements in confidence and professionalism.

The Negotiation Masterclass: Exercises

The negotiation exercises are a central feature of our courses. There are no lectures, PowerPoint presentations or the like. Key learning points emerge from what happens in the exercises and from participants' own experience, questions and comments.

Our extensive suite of negotiation exercises includes the following examples.

- A fee negotiation between a professional-service provider and a potential new client, with time pressure, a competing incumbent supplier and the possibility of significant future business.
- A multi-issue negotiation under competitive pressure with opportunities for the seller to leverage competitive advantage and create extra value for both parties.
- A 'negoti-tender' where a short-listed bidder for a major international supply contract has been invited to the table, is under price pressure, but has the opportunity to improve the 'shape' of the deal in several ways. The bidder faces the classic danger in a negoti-auction: negotiating against yourself!
- A final meeting to settle the last remaining issue on the above deal. Failure to exchange information effectively may result in a sub-optimal solution – or even the collapse of what appeared to be a 'done deal'.
- Purchase and sale of a business where the buyer and seller have different perceptions of a particular risk. Debating who is right, instead of finding a creative solution, will make a deal almost impossible.
- A pharma company seeks to license a product to another. Upfront payment, licence fees, and volume guarantees must be traded – all in the context of competitive tension.
- A firm is submitting a tender for a new client. Can they charge a premium for their quality, or tweak the scope to win the deal while still getting attractive terms?
- A company is selling a non-core division. Another 'negoti-auction', this situation also requires dealing with the non-financial 'must-haves' of the seller and negotiating a solution to a contingent liability.
- A negotiation between a private equity house and a lender of acquisition finance, during an auction for a company. In addition to juggling interest rates, fees and loan size, the sides must assess the costs and benefits of going 'exclusive' with each other.
- A professional services firm seeks to raise the fees on a long-standing annual contract, but the client has better arguments for why the fees should stay flat or even fall.
- One firm has breached its contract with another. Will this be litigated in court, or can they settle beforehand – and perhaps do further business together?
- A retail company wants to renegotiate the lease for a store during a weak market. Can creativity bridge the gap?

We select from our 'library' the exercises that are most relevant to a client's needs.

Apart from full scale negotiation exercises like the examples above, we also give course participants a number of 'mini-practices' where they can rehearse particular critical incidents, such as

- making an effective Background Statement
- putting a firm, packaged Opening Position
- calling an Adjournment without looking weak
- making a Final Offer – and making it stick!

The 'Booster' Day

We strongly recommend a one-day 'Booster' workshop six to twelve months after the Masterclass. The impact of training tends to decline over time, so the Booster encourages participants to fully implement the lessons of the Masterclass – and maximises the payback from our training.

The aims of the Booster are

- to remind participants of the main learning points from the Masterclass
- to give them further opportunities to practise key skills and techniques
- to review any problems they found in implementing the messages of the programme in their real-world negotiations.

The Booster day is built around two negotiation exercises: a one-on-one in the morning and a team negotiation in the afternoon. To save planning time the second simulation is a follow-up deal to the first. As with the Masterclass, video playback and analysis of the exercises brings to life the key learning points and provides personal feedback to participants.

Each exercise gives participants the opportunity to practise the planning and conduct of a complete negotiation and to refresh their knowledge and understanding of the tools and techniques covered in the Masterclass.

'Mini-practices' are also employed.

Participants share their experiences in implementing the skills and techniques acquired on the Masterclass, describe any problems they have encountered, and work together to develop solutions.

They also develop Individual Action Plans to help ensure full implementation of the course lessons in their real world negotiations.

Consulting Services

"Those who can, do. Those who can't, teach."

Or so they say. We do both!

Apart from training in negotiation skills, we also provide specific advice on the conduct of major negotiations. This service can take various forms.

1. Assisting a negotiating team in planning for a negotiation, by applying our Planning Tools to the current negotiation, and providing advice on specific techniques to use at the table. This is most effective when the negotiators have already attended our Masterclass.

An example of this approach was assistance provided to a private equity firm on the disposal of a company in a situation where there was only one potential buyer – and the buyer knew this! The client judged that the sale price had been improved by between £25 and £50 million by following our advice.

2. Continuing to provide advice throughout an extended (multi-meeting) negotiation. This may include sitting in on the negotiations as an Observer.

An example of this approach is advice given to a pharmaceutical company seeking to licence-in a new product, through a series of phone and face-to-face negotiations.

3. A combined training and consulting project: a Masterclass for the team about to be involved in a major negotiation, with a specific focus on planning and teamwork for that negotiation.

An example of this approach was the training and preparation of a team for the negotiation of a very large and complex property joint venture. A major focus of this project was the management of complexity through multi-level meetings using a consistent process and integrating the results at the top level. The client said afterwards "We could never have got the deal done without your help."

In another similar situation the client said "We saved £50m in the first 30 minutes of our negotiations with [the other side], just because of that training."

Our fees for advisory work are usually results-based, with a per-diem component to mitigate our risks.

Training Courses: Terms of Business

Tuition Fee

Masterclass:	£25,500
'Booster':	£8,500

Masterclass Materials

£100 per participant (The Complete Negotiator, and The Pocket Negotiator – both extensively updated in 2015 to reflect the cutting edge of negotiation practice, plus notepad, name card, propelling pencil and negotiation exercise briefs). We provide a high-definition video camera, a tripod and a high-quality microphone.

Travel time is charged for courses held outside the UK.

- £2,125 for short-haul travel (under five hours flight time from London)
- £4,250 for long-haul (five to ten hours flight time)
- £8,500 for extra-long-haul (more than ten hours flight time).

Expenses

The tutor's travel and incidental expenses are charged at cost. Air travel is business class.

Simulation exercises

Existing negotiation exercises are included in the Materials charge.

Client-specific exercises can be developed at extra cost (but are not recommended).

Facilities

The client is responsible for providing suitable training facilities (a main training room, breakout space, 4 x flipcharts and a TV/monitor on a trolley).

The cost of a course in the UK for 12 people is:

Masterclass	£26,700 (£2,225 per head)
'Booster' Day	£8,500 (£708 per head)

(Plus tutor's travel etc. expenses and any facilities cost.)

Payment is due after each course immediately on receipt of our invoice.

UK VAT is charged in addition if applicable.

Cancellation Terms

Over 12 weeks' notice:	no cancellation charge
8 - 12 weeks' notice:	33.3% of fee is payable
4 - 8 weeks' notice:	50% of fee is payable
Under 4 weeks' notice:	75% of fee is payable.

Charges are non-negotiable, in GB Pounds, and are valid for courses booked by 31 December 2022.